

Florent CHOPIN

In search of spontaneous expression, Chopin looks for inspiration through observing everyday life and his surroundings, by seeing the extraordinary in the ordinary. A passionate collector of peculiar objects found in antique stores and flee markets, Chopin has an impressive collection of items that, when put on display, seem to transform and take on different meanings. Taken out of context, a particular object can for instance seem to reconnect with a lost childhood on an intuitive level while in the next second, or simultaneously, create a complex and subjective alphabet of symbols belonging to the realms of adulthood. Different subcategories of animal, plant or human domains are reassembled and twisted at its core. Bones from rodents and small birds, hand-made paper miniatures, and bits and pieces from nature are stripped of their original meaning in order to create a different classification system; ultimately pushing the viewer to question and reinterpret his or her personal reactions to physical phenomena. As thunder can evoke images of a fighter plane in the sky, so can small tangible fragments bring hidden memories back to the fore. Chopin is constantly on the lookout for such fragments that will bring obsolete objects to life; by rediscovering lost memories for those with a receptive mind. Florent Chopin was born in Caen in 1958. He lives and works in Paris.
