

Yves Krief

Yves Krief is a composer whose scores consist not of musical notes, but of skillful combinations of photographs. His collages are portals to a vast language that exceeds the image and its contents; portals that can be compared to the inflections of a voice, or variations of tone: the main expressions of thought and action are carried within the nuanced details.

Each Krief's pieces are combinations of images captured on one of his numerous journeys (Paris, New York or London).

"With composition, I express the sum of all our fantasies through a multitude of symbolic images"

Krief's images, with their saturated colors and irregular lines and perspectives, are hybrids and polymorphics. His work invite us on a very strange journey: it pleases the eye without initially giving anything more intimate away.

Each image is to be seen as a dream, whose resonances become apparent within our subconscious. If Krief's work draws its origins from the expression of something of an intimate and personal nature, his work has today achieved its own autonomy. It places itself within a universal symbolic context; allowing everyone the opportunity to read their own story within it.

Yves Krief was born 1961 in Paris, where he lives and works.
