Antoine Gaussin

Antoine Gaussin is a French photographer who studied journalism and photography. As a journalist, he travelled a lot in Africa in the South Sahara region and in Mongolia. He increasingly began focusing on photography and worked at forging a strong graphic identity for himself. His seascapes series is mainly influenced by his past travels and poetic dimension of open space. He excels at expressing a feeling of visual solitude punctuated by small points of reference.

The series creates a powerful feeling of peace and serenity. Freeing himself from the factual and hyper-detailed dimension of modern photography, he produces works through which the viewer's imagination can fully develop; an invitation to travel in a way, supported by the timeless poetry of black and white.
