Press Release

The first days of summer have that discreet charm that suspends time. We marvel at the fact that it's daylight well into the night, we drink water from the fountain after walking for a few minutes under the blazing sun, we happily stop for an ice cream on the way home from work... They herald the vacations to come, long afternoons basking in the sun or reading in the shade, swimming in the icy waters of a lake, fanning yourselves with the program of summer concerts. The Julyers are packing their bags, while some are still wrapping up a few files, but deep down, we're all ready. Hot town, summer in the city...
