Press Release

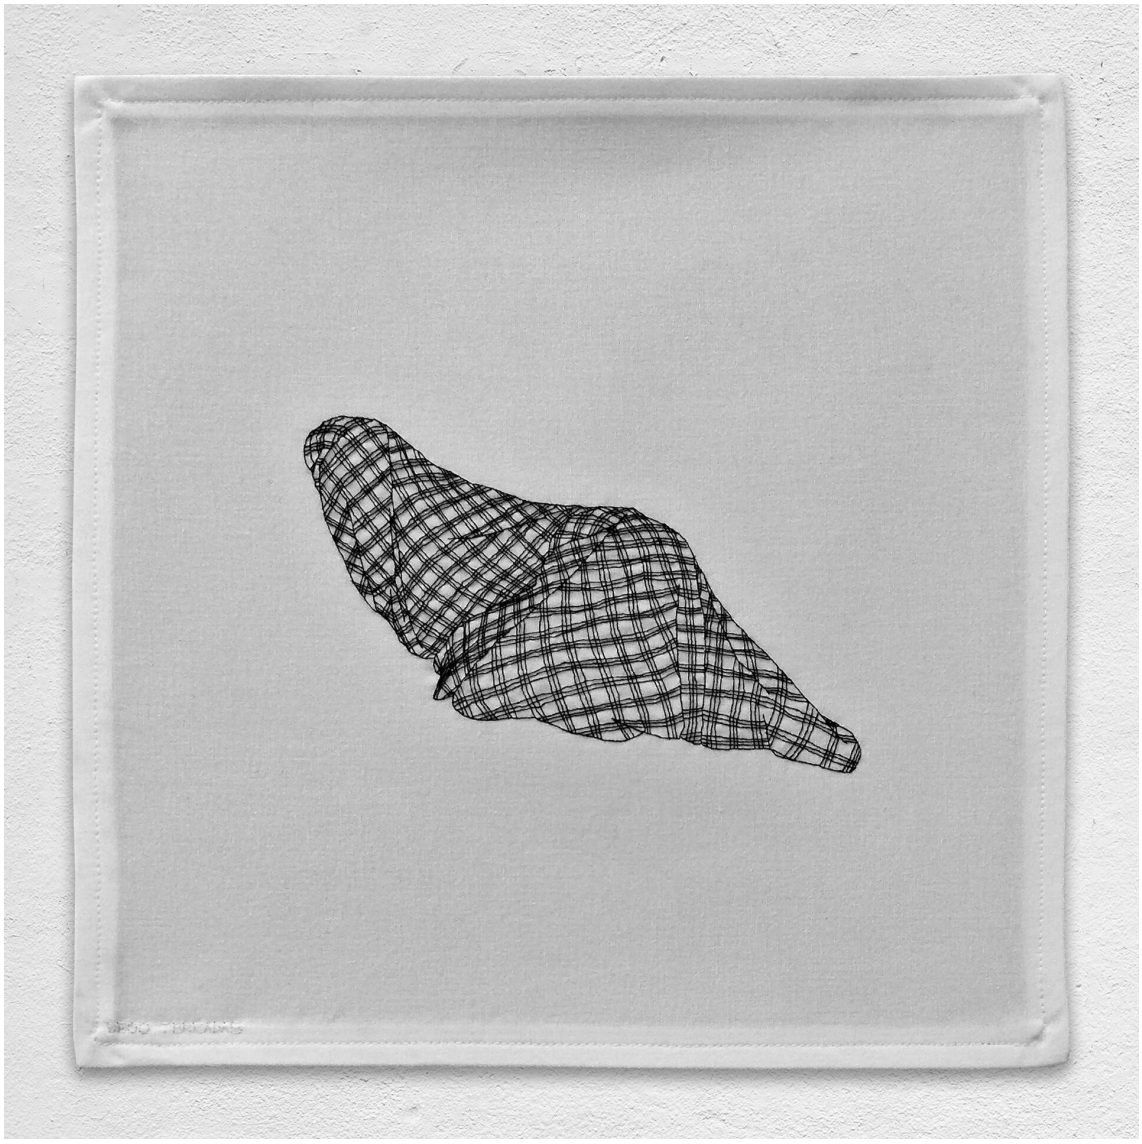

Very few of us have actually set foot on the Moon. Yet, thanks to the astronauts who ventured there and the images captured by telescopes, we all have an idea of its colour: a powdery grey, almost unreal. This rocky landscape kept us dreaming for whole nights when we were children. And who hasn’t imagined floating weightlessly, just like Buzz Aldrin? Our artists, too, seem fascinated by the nuances of our moon. This week, our selection features a palette that shifts between black and white, somewhere between shadow and light, as if suspended in space. Fly me to the moon…
